

Test your current Spanish level

http://www.tiatura.com/tests\_nivel/

I recommend you to take a placement test because I think establishing your starting Spanish level could be important for you to make decisions about your learning process. For instance, to choose a graduated book. By the way, I couldn't find a website to download graduated books in Spanish for free.

Take a Spanish conversation class at Arlington Public Library

Every Thursday, from 7-8:30 PM. It's a drop-in meeting.

http://library.arlingtonva.us/calendar/?event\_category=Language+Learning&event\_search=spanish

In my experience conversation classes are very important to improve your new language no matter what your language level is.

Use these resources

<http://www.learnpracticalspanishonline.com/beginner/beginner-readings.html>

In my opinion this website has a lot of resources useful when you are learning Spanish. If you are still interested in our language exchange meetings the readings on the website could be a roadmap we can follow to organize the sessions.

Idea for better helping you with your Spanish for your Starbucks' job

If you write down a short script in English with an usual interaction with your customers and you send it to me I can translate it into Spanish. Then you can study the script and we can practice it in our language exchange meeting. You should play the barista role and I should play the Spanish speaker customer role. At the same time by reading and translating your script I could learn something more about how to order coffee and other stuffs at Starbucks.